

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of transferring a data packet to another network device, the method includes checking specific information included in a header of the transmitted data packet, and selectively performing either a first transmission mode in which the data packet is transferred without reconfiguration of the transmitted data packet, or a second transmission mode in which the transmitted data packet is transferred after reconfiguration thereof, according to the specific information.